It's my personal (not the college's) belief that Microsoft needs to have several restrictions placed on itself:

1. Fair/open contracts with OEM's that don't limit OEM's right to put additional software/icons on the PC's.
2. Microsoft ought to open up ALL it's Window API's up to all developers so that Microsoft's developers (of other product) don't have a heads up over others. Microsoft has enough of a lead and market share with other products that this would help level the playing field.
